TMSi Logistics to Discuss Vision-Guided, Values-Driven Organizations at National Conference of Operations and Fulfillment (NCOF) 2009

(Portsmouth, NH) – Ron Cain, Chairman and CEO of TMSi Logistics, and Ken Porter, Chief Learning Officer of TMSi Logistics, will be discussing the benefits of building a vision-guided, values-driven organization at the National Conference of Operations and Fulfillment (NCOF) on March 25th, 2009 from 1:45-3pm in Las Vegas. The NCOF conference is sponsored by the United States Postal Service and is the only conference for catalog, online, and multichannel retailers.

Mr. Cain and Mr. Porter's presentation will detail the benefits of creating a shared set of values within an organization while increasing employee productivity and reducing costs for both the company and its clients. The concept of cultural resilience, including the steps companies can take to become more resilient and prosper through these uncertain economic times, will be primary topics of the presentation.

Mr. Cain and Mr. Porter will also give a detailed discussion on LEGACY, TMSi's unique values-driven program proven to reduce costs, improve service levels, and improve sustainability for businesses. The presentation will cover how LEGACY has changed the culture within TMSi Logistics, and how these cultural changes can be successfully implemented by other companies. Future plans for their values-driven culture and suggestions on how other companies can get started will also be included in the presentation.

Ron states: "We are pleased to have the opportunity to present TMSi's proven values-driven LEGACY program at NCOF 2009. Through LEGACY, our team at TMSi hopes to inspire others to achieve resiliency through trying economic times, encourage responsibility through employee engagement and leadership development, and increase efficiency while lowering costs."
